Good Hygiene

In the early days of the COVID-19 pandemic, when fear was the first reaction, toxic hand sanitizers flooded the market and people questioned the efficacy of their non-toxic counterparts.

Now that the frenzy is over, most realize that it was good advice pre-pandemic and continues to be the best advice in a post pandemic world to keep cleaning.

Personal and environmental hygiene is key, from washing your fruits and veggies, to washing your hands before meals and absolutely after using the bathroom.

Our Health is Our Wealth

Most of us know the importance of clean air, healthy eating, exercise and getting enough sleep but are less aware of the damage caused by free radicals and Volatile Organic Compounds (VOC's) and the lasting damage to our bodies from the use of toxic chemicals in our household products.

Examples of Organic Compounds

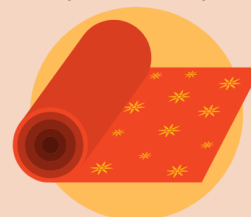

Paper
(Cellulose)

Nail Polish
(Nitrocellulose, butyl acetate)

Candle
(Wax, tallow)

Fabric
(Cellulose, nylon, rayon)

Soap
(Fatty acid salt)

Gasoline
(Mixed hydrocarbons)
